XEROX

the practice of law which I had originally intended. As a young man I joined Xerox Corporation which then had the name of Haloid Company and have spent almost my entire business career with this company where I have been either the president or the chairman since 1966.

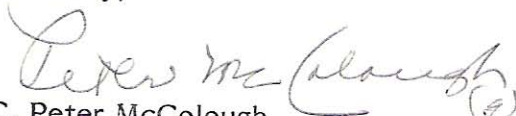

I'm married to the former Virginia White of Philadelphia and we have five children: Peter, 25, a student at Columbia Law School in New York City; Andrew, 24, from Middlebury College in Vermont; Ian, 22, from Dartmouth College in New Hampshire; Virginia 22, Ian's twin, from Colgate University in New York State; and finally, Robert, 16, who lives at home and attends school in my hometown of Greenwich, Connecticut.

Although all of the foregoing I'm sure is not too enlightening for your purpose, I do hope that it does give you some additional information and hopefully it may fill in one or two of the gaps. I would of course be most interested in finding out anything that you learn regarding the McColough family tree. I would also be interested in any information you might have regarding the family since they immigrated to Australia from Nova Scotia.

I did almost forget to mention that in my own immediate family there were four of us. I had one brother who died about ten years ago and who was a lawyer in Calgary, Alberta. I've a sister, married, in Halifax and then my younger sister, married, and living here in the New York area.

It was most interesting hearing from you and most especially to know that we have a common great great grandfather in Archibald McColough.

Sincerely,

C. Peter McColough
